

Pam Williams-Arya MD bio

After finishing my pediatric residency training at CCHMC I practiced general pediatrics for 10 years before returning to complete my developmental-behavior pediatrics fellowship. I have been on faculty in DDBP since 2013 and supervise the developmental-behavioral pediatric fellows as part of my role in LEND.

I have been involved in quality improvement projects on improving access to diagnostic evaluations for children with concerns for autism spectrum disorder or other developmental delay as well as research on the needs of children experiencing homelessness and children affected by the opioid crisis.

What I love most about LEND is working with an amazing group of multi-disciplinary colleagues as well as talented and passionate trainees.

In my free time I enjoy travel, exercise, cooking, reading, and spending time with my husband and children.
